SYNOPSIS Five years of occupation come to an end on May 8, 1945. The rebuilding of the nation can now begin, but first, the final chapter must be written.

In a dark cell at Akershus Fortress sits the man who committed the greatest betrayal of all: Vidkun Quisling.

Now he must be held accountable for his actions and the atrocities caused by Nazi ideology. But first, he is to meet with the spiritual advisor and priest, Peder Olsen.

Can this priest, himself scarred by the brutality of the war, help the man who was on a first-name basis with Hitler find peace of mind?

Is this traitor, who has grandiose ideas about himself and his mission, capable of remorse?

VIDKUN QUISLING - WW2'S MOST INFAMOUS TRAITOR

After the Nazi occupation of Norway ended in 1945, a final chapter had to be written to overcome the trauma of war and to begin reconstructing the nation.

The man who committed the greatest betrayal – he invited Hitler's Nazi Germany to invade Norway – is now in his dark cell: Vidkun Quisling, the Nazi collaborator and functioning Prime Minister during the occupation, is finally held accountable for his atrocities.

Quisling asks to speak with the highest-ranking leader of the church, but the bishop sends the priest Peder Olsen in his place to counsel and support him during his trial and eventually to his execution.

Olsen is himself struggling with trauma after five long years of war and struggles to abide by Quisling's demands of respect and acknowledgement for his duty and efforts.

Meanwhile, the Norwegian people want nothing from Quisling but confessions, remorse, and vengeance.

In his quest to untangle Quisling's grandiose mission, Peder Olsen finds himself teetering on the edge of his moral void, almost losing sight of right and wrong.

In this exceptional feature by Erik Poppe and writers Anna Bache-Wiig and Siv Rajendram (U 22 July – Berlinale Competition), we follow the notorious traitor Vidkun Quisling from the days of peace in 1945, through captivity and trial, and finally towards the verdict and his execution, in a thriller-like tale of a psychological and claustrophobic struggle over truth and lies, faith and doubt.

In the role of Vidkun Quisling, we find one of Scandinavia's most acclaimed actors, Gard B. Eidsvold. He has appeared in over 90 films and TV series, including the Netflix hit movie Troll, HBO's global success Beforeigners, and In Order of Disappearance alongside Stellan Skarsgård and Bruno Ganz.

Anders Danielsen Lie, last seen in Mother's Instinct alongside Anne Hathaway and Jessica Chastain, portrays the priest, Peder Olsen. He achieved his major international breakthrough with The Worst Person in the World and has been noted in critically acclaimed films such as Sick of Myself and Bergman Island Both The Worst Person in the World and Bergman Island participated in the main competition at the Cannes Film Festival in 2021.

ABOUT THE PROJECT

Quisling – The Final Days is based on extensive research and unique source material. Among the sources being used is a diary written by the priest, Peder Olsen, in which he documents his time as Quisling's confidant and one of Quisling's two spiritual advisors in prison during the period from his arrest until his execution on October 24, 1945.

In the film, we follow Vidkun Quisling from the initial days of the Liberation in 1945, through his captivity and trial, and on up to the final verdict and his execution. We gain condensed insight into his psychological and claustrophobic struggle with the truth and lies, faith and doubt.

*It was actually Winston Churchill who immortalized the term "quisling" in his 1941 speech, condemning collaborators with invading forces as "a vile race of Quislings." He predicted the term would carry the scorn of mankind for centuries.

TRYING TO UNDERSTAND WHAT TOOK PLACE

“How do you make a film about Quisling?” asks Gard B. Eidsvold.

“How do you defend making a film about Quisling? A defense lawyer has to defend their client. As an actor, I have to try to get under his skin and to defend him with everything I've got.” But the real purpose of this film, he explains is, of course, “to try and understand what took place. How could it happen?”

“My father Knut (1913-1994) was a political opponent to the Quisling government,” the actor continues. He helped people flee to Sweden but was arrested in July 1944 for being in the possession of illegal materials such as writings.

“For six months, he was tortured by Norwegian policemen in Oslo - with the blessing of Minister President Vidkun Quisling.” After spending several months in solitary confinement in Møllergata, where prisoners were often subject to interrogation, he then got transferred to Grini, a Nazi concentration camp in Bærum, Norway. It was primarily used for political prisoners. Prisoners were forced to work in manufacturing, agriculture and other manual labor, much taking place outside.

“My father never talked about it... But I know it took its toll. It left him with mental scars and a drinking problem.”

The acclaimed actor reflects on whether he carries his father's trauma in his DNA?

“Can the trauma of war be passed on to the next generation? As an actor, I've always been interested in notions such as reconciliation and forgiveness: the ability to forgive and to ask for forgiveness. Which can prove extremely difficult. Would my father have benefited if his tormentors had asked for forgiveness? If they had felt remorse? If Quisling had shown remorse?

And what about me? Would I have been spared from my own personal darkness?”

Erik Poppe

ERIK POPPE, Director

Erik Poppe (°1960) is one of Norway's most seasoned and awarded film directors. Originally a photographer, he has garnered significant acclaim for his feature films both among audiences and critics, nationally and internationally. His latest film, The Emigrants, premiered in August 2022.

He is renowned for his fearless and precise interpretations of historically complex dramas and his ability to portray intricate historical events and human themes.

He debuted as a film director with Schpaaa in 1998, and since then, he has received numerous international film awards. Poppe won the Amanda Award for Best Film with Hawaii, Oslo in 2004 and A Thousand Times Good Night in 2014. Troubled Water was voted the best Norwegian film of the year by cinema managers in 2008 and became the first film in history to win both the Audience Award and the Best Film award at the Hamptons International Film Festival that same fall.

In 2016, Poppe directed The King's Choice, which was shortlisted for the Oscar for Best Foreign Language Film and selected for the Panorama program in Berlin in 2017. The film won the Amanda Award for Best Film in 2017. Poppe was also awarded the Critics' Prize for The King's Choice in 2017, marking the fourth time he received this prize. The film U-July 22 participated in the main competition in Berlin in 2018.

THE SCREENPLAY

Screenplay by Siv Rajendram Eliassen and Anna Bache-Wiig, based on a story by Ravn Lanesskog and an idea by Stig Svendsen and Finn Gjerdrum.

Siv Rajendram Eliassen (°1967) has extensive experience with TV drama and feature films. She has written and co-authored some of Norway's most prominent TV series. She won the Gullruten award for the series Ran (2007) and Størst av alt (2007), and the Amanda Award for Best Screenplay for Varg Veum – Falne Engler (2008). Her work also includes the Danish TV series Den som dræber (2011), which was adapted into an English-language version starring Chlöe Sevigny (Those Who Kill, 2014).

Anna Bache-Wiig (°1975) graduated from the Norwegian National Academy of Theatre in 1998 and has since worked as an actress at several of Norway's largest theater stages, as well as appearing in some of Norway's most popular films and TV series, including the Emmy-winning Mammon (2014). She is also a recognized and critically acclaimed author, debuting with her first novel Det aller fineste in 2003, followed by Sommernattsdrøm (2005), Lasses hus (2009), and then the picture book Don Fridtjof (2010), illustrated by Lisa Aisato.

Rajendram and Bache-Wiig began their collaboration in 2011, and together they created TV series such as Frikjent (2015/2016) and Heksejakt (2019).

They have previously collaborated with Erik Poppe on the feature films Utøya: July 22 (2018) and The Emigrants (2022) and wrote the screenplay for the audience favorite, Three Wishes for Cinderella (2020).

THE PRODUCTION

Quisling – The Final Days is produced by Paradox, represented by Finn Gjerdrum and Stein B. Kvae. They have produced all of Erik Poppe's films.

Paradox is one of Norway's leading film production companies, and was established in 1998. The company produced and co-produced more than 30 features and participated three times at the Berlinale Main Competition, as well as being shortlisted for the Oscars for Best foreign film in 2017. In 2020, Paradox started to produce TV series with a comedy-drama for HBO. Today, the company works with several streamers and broadcasters on several series.

The ambition as a company is to continue developing films and series of high artistic quality that reach a broad audience. This places great demands on Paradox, the people they work with, and the stories they choose to tell. The company is, in other words, always looking for the highest quality in both people and stories.

There's a strong belief that the talent is not only in front or behind the camera, but also in all the other stages of production.
