

SAMMANKOPPLA

limited collection

Created in Bangkok, ready for the world

No matter where you live, more and more people are moving into small city spaces than ever. That's why we've worked with Thai fashion designers Greyhound Original to develop SAMMANKOPPLA, a limited collection of products that blends Bangkok street style with our home furnishing expertise.

It's further inspired by recycling, reusing, and creative re-purposing processes, and has been designed to be multifunctional and affordable – making it ideal for use by people all over the world.

Who are Greyhound Original?

The Greyhound story began in the 1980s, when four friends with a passion for living well decided to open a clothes store together. Fast forward several years, and they're now selling their designs from new locations in Hong Kong, Shanghai and London – and their food from their Greyhound Cafés in hometown Bangkok.

“Greyhound has a relaxed, playful attitude to design and always adds a twist. It’s been great to bring that to IKEA”, says Michael Nikolic, Creative Leader at IKEA.

Much of the collection features bold patterns inspired by Bangkok's urban landscape and Greyhound's graphic fashion sensibilities. The houndstooth design that appears on this bag is one that's frequently found in traditional Thai weaving – but here's it's made using modern materials.

This mat would traditionally be woven in natural fibres, but we've made use of PET bottles for part of it instead - a great way of repurposing material that would otherwise go to waste.

cushion, triangular

You'll find cushions shaped like this in markets throughout South-East Asia - they're the perfect shape for resting your back on.

Like Bhanu Inkawat, Executive Creative Director at Greyhound Original says, "This is a collection influenced by a city where anything goes, and it shows that imperfection can be perfect."

If it's stylish, why shouldn't your lamp look like an old plastic bottle?
