

Taste what Colorado's newest Certified Master Chef candidate is cooking up at exclusive Bistro Colorado media night dinner

Owner/Chef Travis Smith is preparing for grueling 8-day ACF Master Chef Exam

Thursday, July 6, 2017 — You and a guest are invited to attend an evening of exquisite seasonal fare in the cool mountain air of Evergreen on Thursday, July 27th at Bistro Colorado Restaurant and Wine Bar.

Owner/Chef Travis Smith is getting ready to take the nation's most challenging exam to become one of a small number of American Culinary Federation Certified Master Chefs. On this special night, Chef Travis will design and prepare a summer menu featuring fresh, seasonal and local ingredients in classic recipes, executed with precision and attention to detail.

During dinner, you will gain insight on what it takes to succeed in the culinary industry's toughest test. The 8-day cooking marathon in October puts culinary skills, experience and stamina to the ultimate test. It is so difficult to pass that the failure rate is 80%. Fewer than 70 Certified Master Chefs currently exist in the U.S. If Chef Travis passes the exam, he will join five other CMCs who live and work in Colorado, including Bill Franklin, Ed Janos, David Kellaway, Dieter Kiessling and John Johnstone.

Bistro Colorado is the perfect place to hone the necessary skills. The restaurant features a rotating seasonal menu of local produce, hand-selected meat, fish and game. "Colorado is full of foodies and craft beer and wine connoisseurs who have sophisticated palates," said Chef Travis. "People care about what they're going to nourish their bodies with and we designed Bistro Colorado with those diners in mind."
