Play with LEGO bricks all day in the best summer job ever!

LEGOLAND Discovery Center Atlanta hiring Playmakers – the job that’s all about play

Atlanta (May 17, 2019) – What if you could play all day and get paid? That’s what LEGOLAND Discovery Center Atlanta is looking for as it is hiring Playmakers for the busy summer season. The role of a Playmaker is to engage with kids and parents to ensure they have the most awesome visit. From helping to build a LEGO tower that’s strong enough to survive an earthquake to making and racing the fastest LEGO car, these play experts bring LEGO to life and show guests how to play with LEGO bricks in ways that they couldn’t do at home.

Play is serious business at LEGOLAND Discovery Center Atlanta, and Playmakers will complete a course to learn all about the fundamentals of play. The course focuses on key skills to facilitate play, including learning how children develop through play; how to communicate with children of different ages; inspiring and engaging children with play; and how to include adults in play. Playmakers will also learn about five different types of play that can be experienced at LEGOLAND Discovery Center Atlanta. By becoming experts in the theory and practice of play, Playmakers can ensure that families have the most fun possible when they visit the top Atlanta attraction.

“LEGOLAND Discovery Center and the Playmaker program encourage play with a purpose to grow the minds and abilities of children and bring families together,” said Penda Meftah, General Manager of LEGOLAND Discovery Center Atlanta. “When we say it’s time to get to work, it’s really time to play every day in what we believe is the area’s most fun job.”

Potential Playmakers can apply at the career center here and will need to inspire creativity, exude excitement and ultimately have fun while helping kids and parents have a brickastic day of play. They should take fun seriously because this is one seriously fun role!
