

KAREN ELSON

Karen Elson, the new Jo Malone London Girl, is a British supermodel, musician and songwriter. She now lives between Nashville, Tennessee and New York City but was born in Manchester, England, where she was discovered at the age 16. By her 18th birthday, she had been photographed by Steven Meisel for the cover of Italian Vogue.

Karen has also graced the covers of British Vogue, W Magazine, numerous international editions of Harper's Bazaar, Elle, and Marie Claire, as well as countless other magazines. She has worked with an array of the world's leading photographers, from Richard Avedon and Irving Penn to Mario Testino, Bruce Weber, Annie Leibovitz, Craig McDean, David Sims, Tim Walker, and Inez van Lamsweerde & Vinoodh Matadin.

Karen's modeling career has been exceptional and she is widely recognized as a fashion world luminary. She has appeared in campaigns for Yves Saint Laurent, Chanel, Armani, Tiffany, Versace, Prada, Dior and Louis Vuitton, and walked the runways of Marc Jacobs, Alexander McQueen, Chanel, Givenchy, Calvin Klein, Tom Ford, Jason Wu, Miu Miu, and Michael Kors.

Karen is also a singer, songwriter and performer. She has been a creative director of the New York City-based cabaret troop The Citizens Band for over 10 Years. She has recorded with Beck, Cat Power and Robert Plant, and in 2010 she released her self-written debut album, "The Ghost Who Walks", to great acclaim. Her sophomore album, "Double Roses," is scheduled for release March 2017.

In 2015, Harper's Bazaar named Karen "Woman of the Year" for her work as an ambassador for Save The Children. Karen's other philanthropic ventures include Vintage Vanguard, which she co-founded with filmmaker Liz Goldwyn with the goal of using fashion as a tool for empowering women.
