Gemini Live

- We're launching a new conversational experience that uses our latest voice technology, allowing users to brainstorm, learn, and practice out loud with real-time spoken responses.
- Gemini adapts to your conversational style so you can interrupt, ask follow-up questions or come back to the conversation later with ease.
- To make speaking to Gemini feel even more natural, we're introducing 10 new voices to choose from, so you can pick the tone and style that works best for you.
- Gemini Live will start rolling out today to Gemini Advanced subscribers globally, in English via the Gemini app on Android devices. In the coming weeks, we'll expand availability to iOS users via the Google app.

Connect with even more Google apps and services

- We're launching new extensions in the coming weeks, including Keep, Tasks, Utilities, Calendar, and expanded features on YouTube Music.
- Extensions connect Gemini to other apps and services you rely on, letting you pull information and complete tasks directly in your chat.
- This new set of extensions will start rolling out to users in the coming weeks in all countries and languages that Gemini supports. It'll be available for both web and mobile users across Gemini and Gemini Advanced.

Get contextual help from Gemini on Android

- Gemini's overlay provides instant AI assistance on your phone. Activate by holding the power button or saying "Hey Google" to get quick answers, contextual help, and everyday assistance without leaving your current screen.
- Staying within the context of the screen you were on makes Gemini's output more practical and easier to use. For example, you can tap the "Ask about this screen" suggestion to get help with what's on your screen or if you're using YouTube, ask questions about what you're watching. Or if you're preparing for a trip abroad and have just watched a travel vlog — tap "Ask about this video" and ask for a list of all the restaurants mentioned in the video — and for Gemini to add them to Google Maps.
