Dante de Blasio's not at a loss for words.

The First Son won a state debate championship Sunday along with his partner, a fellow student from Brooklyn Technical High School.

Mayor de Blasio and First Lady Chirlane McCray attended the championship match at Stuyvesant High School, where Dante, a senior, and his partner Samuel Eluto, a Brooklyn Tech junior, debated a pair of students from Bronx Science on environmental preservation.

Dante told The New York Times, which first reported his victory, that he felt "really satisfied" with his performance.

"I felt like all the work I had done up until this point had really been worth something."

Dante de Blasio (l.) and Samuel Eluto (second from r.), representing Brooklyn Tech, won a state debate championship on Sunday.

His parents were thrilled.

“Congratulations Dante, Sam and your amazing coaches on winning the State Championship for Policy Debate!” McCray tweeted on Thursday.

The First Family celebrated the victory by dining out at Bogota, a Colombian restaurant in Park Slope, Brooklyn.

WOW ! With a mom who's a black lesbian, a dad who's a white crook who doesn't know how to tell time, and a kid who looks like he stepped out of 1968 and whose name is straight out of Hell, all you can say is: What a family !
