Gruen

Gruen, the show that unpicks the dark arts of advertising, branding and spin is back for its 10th season.

We are drowning in more marketing than ever. People are now brands, while brands pretend to be people. We're living in a world where celebrities are "influencers", influencers are celebrities and words like "influencer" have lost all meaning. Whether you're guiltily watching your favourite reality telly show, trawling Gumtree for a second-hand stereo or checking the weather on the BOM website - you can't avoid advertising. The only defence is understanding how it all works.

Enter host Wil Anderson, Russel Howcroft, Todd Sampson and a trusty team of advertising experts, including Dee Madigan and Claire Salvetti. Other panellists this season include Christina Aventi and Karen Ferry.

The weekly topical series will cast a steely eye over new marketing terrain and any PR disasters unlucky enough to erupt during the course of the season. Gruen will expose the brilliant, bad and downright mediocre of advertising and spin and continue to throw impossible, challenging briefs to willing agencies in The Pitch.

Join us as we sneak ads onto the ABC and call bullshit on brands pretending they're just like us.

Julia Zemiro's Home Delivery

The kitchen Maggie Beer made famous in The Cook and the Chef may be in the heart of the Barossa Valley, but our most beloved foodie is originally from Sydney's Lakemba.

Julia meets up with Maggie in Punchbowl, and they set off in a chauffeur-driven Corolla for a tour around her old neighbourhood. As they travel along the main drag, Maggie reminisces about the days when there were only a few shops and a picture theatre. When they visit the former home of Maggie's 'spinster' aunts, she's quite overcome with emotion. Maggie tells Julia that, like her mother, she's a person who's always been able to find the joy in the everyday, and talks about her parents' love of music and cooking, and the catering business they started when she was a teenager.

At Wiley Park Girls High, Maggie reflects on having left school at 14 to work as a receptionist, and thinks this gave her the grit to make a go of the pheasant farm restaurant she and her husband started years later.

Maggie then takes Julia to her farm in her beloved Barossa Valley. This has been Maggie's home since she and Colin moved there with a plan to breed game birds. What began as a simple farm shop catering to picnickers grew into a culinary sensation. Maggie describes the evolutions of the business and how their lives changed when they won a coveted Remy Martin/Gourmet Traveller Best Australian Restaurant Award.

Maggie speaks candidly about being obsessive, and how working too hard nearly brought her undone. Other than food, Maggie's greatest love is music, and she proudly shows off the exquisitely restored Hill and Son organ at the Barossa Regional Gallery in Tanunda. She talks about the power of music and the pleasure she derives from singing in a choir.

The episode winds up at the beautiful Mengler Hill Lookout where Maggie reflects on her charmed life. She says she has no plans to retire and is kept busy and fulfilled with her businesses and The Maggie Beer Foundation - the charitable organization she set up to improve food and nutrition in aged-care facilities around Australia.

Corey White's Roadmap to Paradise

The world's got some crushing problems; some overwhelming, terrifying, civilisation crushing problems.

The best and brightest have been trying to solve them for decades, even centuries. The entire hive mind of humanity has failed to solve its most vexing challenges so maybe it's time to turn to the next least best option and ask a three-time university dropout and ex-ice addict what he's got kicking around in his solution box.

The ABC did just that, and the result is Corey White's Roadmap To Paradise.

Corey White's Roadmap to Paradise is a brand-new series like no other, which will see Corey try to solve the biggest problems facing everyday Australians.

Corey White's Roadmap To Paradise will set Corey on a collision course with conventional wisdom as he takes on urgent structural issues in each of the series' ten episodes.

At the end of this series, Corey will have had a shot at fixing Democracy, Australia Day, Environmentalism, Capitalism, Gambling, Domestic Violence, War on Drugs, Foster Care, Terrorism and Housing.

This series unites an array of voices that you rarely hear on TV and lives in a unique genre of its own combining expert interviews, comedy sketches and Corey's raw monologues. Corey is spectacularly unqualified to propose how to fix the world's most urgent problems, but that's not going to stop him from having a go (plus he has his own Australian Story episode which he figures counts for something).

This week Corey looks at capitalism. Capitalism has done some good things, like giving us Twisties, but the next stage will be terrifying. This week Corey asks how the rich will protect themselves from the angry hoards whose jobs have been stolen by robots.

Wentworth

Unsettled by an erotic dream she had about Franky, Erica (Leeanna Walsman) tries to avoid her, but they're thrown together when Channing (Martin Sacks) decides to use Franky (Nicole da Silva) as the poster girl for prison reform. When forced to tutor Franky, their close proximity and Franky's provocation leave Erica hot and bothered.

Erica's sexual frustration at work illuminates the problems in her relationship with her fiancé Mark (Damon Gameau), and she has to cope with a darker side of herself, forcing her to make a difficult choice.

Stripped of her peer worker duties Liz's (Celia Ireland) drinking problem spirals and she alienates the women until a close call gives her the much-needed perspective. Meanwhile, a connection develops between Bea (Danielle Cormack) and Officer Will Jackson (Robbie Magasiva) prompting Bea to confide in Liz about the brutal truth of her marriage to Harry (Jake Ryan).

Short synopsis

Harrow

Tom Pinfold, a mourning widower, murders a haematologist and tries to commit suicide. After being incorrectly pronounced dead by paramedics, he wakes up on Harrow's autopsy table. Harrow tries to assist the badly injured man, but Pinfold turns on Harrow and threatens him with a knife, holding him captive in the exam room. It's a public holiday and they're alone in the morgue, so Harrow can't call for help and must use his wits to take control of the situation.

While Harrow is trapped in the morgue, Dass pieces together clues in Quinn's case. Simon has also been piecing together the mystery and he and Dass end up on the deck of the Bettie both thinking the unthinkable – did Harrow kill Quinn?

Meanwhile, Harrow faces off with Pinfold, who eventually collapses. Harrow is forced to choose between saving Pinfold and rushing to the Bettie to cover his crime.

Dass discovers that Harrow destroyed evidence related to Quinn's murder investigation – proof that he was covering his tracks. She shows Nichols, who has Harrow arrested. The Bettie is searched and Dass zeroes in on the antique medical kit she believes was used to sever Quinn's finger.

But when this turns into a dead-end, Harrow appears to be off the hook for good. Best of all, he is reunited with Fern. But just as Harrow thinks he may be returning to a "normal" life, a final twist threatens everything. CAST: Ioan Gruffudd, Mirrah Foulkes.
