Brussels 2023 Urban Summit

Brussels 20Urban23 Summit

Can Cities Save the World?

Over 2.600 politicians, academics and civil society representatives meet in Brussels!

Start of the Brussels Urban Summit 2023.

Over 2,600 politicians, academics and civil society representatives from 600 cities around the world have confirmed participation in the Brussels Urban Summit from 12 to 15 June, including more than 160 mayors from cities worldwide.

By 2050, the United Nations estimates that two thirds of the planet's inhabitants will live in urban areas. These areas are therefore key to facing today and tomorrow's global challenges, such as climate change, migration, urban growth and inequality, the consequences of which will determine the fate of billions living in our cities. The Brussels Urban Summit convenes three international city conferences to discuss urban challenges and solutions: the triannual 14th Metropolis World Congress, the Eurocities Annual Conference and the 6th Meeting of the OECD Champion Mayors for Inclusive Growth Initiative.

During the Summit Opening on Tuesday 13/6 at 10am, Mayor of Kiyv Vitali Klitschko and President of the European Commission Ursula von der Leyen will address attendees via livestream.

Brussels 20Urban23 Summit

The Brussels Urban Summit, bringing together the biggest city networks, is uniquely suited to foster discussions about urban solutions to global challenges, concrete paths to their implementation and the critical role that cities will play in this journey. Brussels, the capital of the European Union, will host more than 2,600 politicians and city experts representing over 600 cities worldwide gather in Brussels. The honoured participants of the Summit include: Anne Hidalgo (mayor of Paris), Barthélémy Toye Dias (mayor of Dakar), Mansur Yavaş (mayor of Ankara), Jaime Pumarejo (mayor of Barranquilla), Asmaa Rhlalou (mayor of Rabat), Balendra Shah (mayor of Kathmandu), Emmanuel Serunjoji (mayor of Kawempe, Kampala), Fabian Mayer (mayor of Stuttgart), Sōichirō Takashima (mayor of Fukuoka), Karin Wångård (mayor of Stockholm), Ricardo Rio (mayor of Braga), Susan Aitken (mayor of Glasgow), Kostas Bakoyannis (mayor of Athens) and many more influential politicians. All believe that cities are at forefront of answering today's challenges and will be even more so in the future. They are committed to collaborate internationally to further these solutions.

In addition to plenary sessions, the programme of the BUS includes meetings and workshops, power lunches, and site visits to allow participants to learn from one another and share their solutions to common challenges affecting cities worldwide, while engaging in genuine debate—when ideas clash, innovation is born.

HM Mathilde Queen of Belgium will participate in a power lunch on mental health in cities.

This Summit, designed to create debate, understanding, engagement and collaboration among cities, politicians, academics and the Brussels-based stakeholder community, will provide a platform to all, making every voice count in the search for a better urban future.

The Brussels Urban Summit is an initiative of the Brussels Capital Region, Eurocities, Metropolis and the OECD Champion Mayors for Inclusive Growth Initiative. In addition to these leading partners, the Summit counts among its partners: the City of Brussels, the European Commission, the United Cities and Local Governments, the Global Parliament of Mayors, and many others. The Press Club Brussels Europe and Politico are media partners of the Brussels Urban Summit.

Brussels 20Urban23 Summit

The Brussels Capital Region

The capital of Belgium, host of this important urban conference, is also headquarters to numerous European and international institutions. Despite being pocket-sized, this cosmopolitan city is home to a hyper-international community, with the world's second largest number of nationalities represented among its inhabitants, after Dubai. What differentiates Brussels from other metropolitan cities is that it is a city of minorities, with no dominant culture.

In just 10 years, the city has rapidly initiated a metamorphosis from a city for cars to a city for people. However, Brussels policymakers will not stop there—they also want to play a pioneering role in the fight against inequality and climate change.

Pascal Smet is State Secretary of the Brussels Capital Region, responsible for Urbanism and Heritage and European and International Relations. He is the key figure in the transformation of public spaces in Brussels, which began by making squares car-free, constructing bicycle lanes and creating new tram lines. Smet is a strong believer and pioneer of coalitions for forward-looking cities.

Pascal Smet, State Secretary of the Brussels Capital Region, for European and International Relations:

"For the first time ever, the three largest city networks are coming together to discuss major societal challenges and formulate urban solutions. It is only right this global city conference takes place in Brussels, a hyperinternational diverse metropolis and urban laboratory for innovation. The Brussels Urban Summit confirms Brussels' international status as diplomatic capital of the world."

Brussels 20Urban23 Summit

Rudi Vervoort, Minister-President of the Government of the Brussels-Capital Region:

"I am convinced that cooperation is essential to meet the challenges we face. The Brussels Urban Summit aims to trigger positive change that will resonate in cities worldwide. We can inspire each other, challenge ingrained ways of thinking and create a shared vision for an urban sustainable development that leaves no one behind."

Sven Gatz, Minister of the Government of the Brussels Capital Region, responsible for Finance, Budget, Civil Service, the Promotion of Multilingualism and the Image of Brussels:

"This Brussels Urban Summit addresses almost all the big questions that cities are grappling with today. Our cities are hubs of innovation, but these days they are also facing major challenges such as migration, climate change, inequality, sustainability, social cohesion, etc. As minister in the Brussels Capital Region, I am proud that we were able to convince over a thousand politicians, experts and civil society representatives from more than 300 cities around the world to attend this summit."

Eurocities

Eurocities wants to make cities places where everyone can enjoy a good quality of life, is able to move around safely, access quality and inclusive public services and benefit from a healthy environment. Eurocities does this by inspiring municipalities and EU decision-makers through networking with more than 200 larger European cities, which together represent some 130 million people across 38 countries, and by gathering evidence of how policy-making impacts on people. Connect with us on Twitter, LinkedIn, Instagram, Facebook

Our key events:

- 15 June, 10:00 - 11:30 City leadership in a global climate crisis. The session will highlight the dramatic impact of climate change in cities and demonstrate how urban leaders are shaping the pathway to a climate-neutral future
- 15 June, 11:30 - 12:00 Summit Conclusions reflecting the main messages and takeaways from the Brussels Urban Summit
- 14 June, 16:00 - 18:00 Eurocities General Assembly. The discussion will focus on the 2024 EU Parliament elections and what the next European political mandate may mean for cities
- 14 June, 19:00 - 23:00 Eurocities Awards. The prizes recognise outstanding achievements by Eurocities members in the delivery of local activities or practices to improve urban life quality
- 15 June, 08:30-09:45 Mayors Digital Assembly and Mayors signing up for sustainable culture

André Sobczak, Secretary General, Eurocities:

“Many of Europe’s cities have been here for many centuries, if not millennia. The national governments and the European institutions are, so to speak, the new kids on the block. This may explain why our cities have the experience and the skills to find solutions for today’s and tomorrow’s global challenges. And this is why cities always put local people’s quality of life front and centre, and why they must have the respect of other levels of government and their rightful place at the table.”

Metropolis

Metropolis brings together big cities to share solutions that improve metropolitan quality of life.

Big cities are great. They foster innovation, creativity, scientific progress, productivity, diversity and exchange. But life in big metropolitan spaces is not great for everyone. It can bring pollution, traffic congestion, segregation, noise, substandard housing, and climate risks. We want to change that.

At the Brussels Urban Summit, we will be elevating the voice of cities to the world stage. Our membership is global - with over 140 cities across Africa, Asia, Europe, North America and South America. By sharing this international expertise, we can make cities more liveable and prepare them for the future.

Our key events:

- 12 June, 14:50 - 16:15 Metropolis Policy Debate: Greening Cities: A Pathway to Social Inclusion?
This exclusive political dialogue features global political leaders who will share their insights on how greening cities could be a tool for social equity and tackling climate change. Press is invited for the opening of the event only.
- 14 June, 14:00 - 16:00 Metropolis General Assembly
Metropolis will officially welcome new members, launch our new strategic plan and elect a new board of directors and president. This is a closed event for Metropolis members, but press may attend.

Jordi Vaquer, Secretary General of Metropolis:

"It has been six years since the large cities that form the Metropolis community last met in person. Our World Congress at the Brussels Urban Summit will demonstrate that the spirit of cooperation is still strong, despite all the disruptions and polarization of recent years. Metropolitan leaders are as focused as ever in securing better quality of life in big cities worldwide, and they are putting aside their differences to work together on solutions to the pressing challenges facing urban spaces."

OECD Champion Mayors for Inclusive Growth Initiative

Since 2016, the OECD Champion Mayors for Inclusive Growth Initiative has been at the forefront of the global debate on inequalities to shape a more inclusive future in cities. From the consequences of the COVID-19 pandemic to war in Europe, a series of unprecedented shocks are confronting our cities and threatening the foundations of inclusive growth. At the same time, cities are facing multiple structural challenges, ranging from addressing housing affordability to embracing the net-zero and just transition, coping with digitalisation, and rebuilding trust in democracy.

The OECD Champion Mayors will convene at the Brussels Urban Summit to discuss how to address the most pressing issues facing cities while building resilience and opportunities for all. The OECD is joining forces with Eurocities and Metropolis to amplify the voices of mayors in the global arena. See the list of the OECD Champion Mayors, a global coalition of over 60 mayors from OECD countries and beyond.

6th Meeting of the OECD Champion Mayors for Inclusive Growth: Confronting the cost of living and housing crises in cities

Even before the current cost-of-living crisis, households were paying more and more for housing. Average real house prices rose by 77% between 1996 and 2022, while GDP per capita grew only by 29% during the same period. The prices for utilities, housing maintenance and repair rose by 20% year over year in 2022. As a result, more than one in three low-income tenants spent 40% or more of their disposable income on rents. Cities have become the focal point of this housing crisis. In 2021, across 17 OECD countries with available data, buying a house in a metropolitan region was 40 percentage points (pp) more expensive than in a region far from a metropolitan area. Within metropolitan areas, city centres are on average 30% more expensive than suburbs. The compounding cost-of-living and housing crises are challenging inclusive growth while potentially deepening inequalities in cities.

Brussels 20Urban23 Summit

During the 6th Meeting of the OECD Champion Mayors for Inclusive Growth, over 40 city leaders will discuss measures to tackle the cost-of-living crisis and boost more affordable and sustainable urban housing. The Champion Mayors will endorse a set of collective commitments through the “Brussels Blueprint for Affordable Cities and Housing for All” to alleviate short-term pressures on the cost of living and scale up long-term change in housing. The OECD will also launch a policy paper with new data and analysis on housing in cities.

Our key events:

- 13 June, 17:50 - 18:00 Meeting of the OECD Champion Mayors for Inclusive Growth Initiative. Journalists are invited to attend the closing remarks by Dagur Eggertsson, mayor of Reykjavik and Chair of the OECD Champion Mayors, and Yoshiki Takeuchi, OECD Deputy Secretary-General. Mayors are available for interviews following the session close at 18:00.
- 13 June, 10:30 - 12:00 Plenary session “Tackling inequalities and rebuilding the social contract in cities,”
The OECD will also lead the first plenary session with remarks by OECD Secretary-General Mathias Cormann.
- 14 June, 14:00 - 15:30 Workshop “Brick and mortar or click to order? The future of SMEs in city centres”
- 14 June, 16:00 - 17:30 Workshop “The changing organization of work and workplaces: drivers and implications for intermediary cities / Midsized Cities”

Lamia Kamal-Chaoui, Director, OECD Centre for Entrepreneurship, SMEs, Regions and Cities:

“Inequality is pulling our cities apart. The cost-of-living crisis is piling on the pressure - when cities are unaffordable it undermines inclusive growth and jeopardises trust in our democratic values and the social contract. The OECD Champion Mayors for Inclusive Growth are meeting at the Brussels Urban Summit to respond to rising inequalities and make their cities more affordable for all.”
