Toilet Facts

- The average person visits the toilet 2,500 times a year. That's about 6–8 times a day. We spend about three years of our lives using the toilet.
- The average life expectancy of a toilet is 50 years.
- The average person uses about 57 sheets of toilet paper every day.
- In the Middle Ages moss and leaves were used as toilet paper.
- The first flush toilet was invented in 1596, but didn't become widespread until 1851. Toilet paper has been around almost as long. It was invented in 1857.
- 7 million cell phones accidentally are dropped in the toilet every year.
- Americans use 433 million miles of toilet paper every year. That's enough to stretch to the sun and back!
- World Toilet Day is on November 19.

The Trade Pros need new transportation! Color these pages then follow the instructions to fold the paper into a new Trade Pro Airplane!

Triclog-o-tops used too much toilet paper and clogged the toilet!
Help her untangle the mess by completing the maze above.

Oh no! T-wrecks played a little too hard and now the bathroom is broken. Color this page to help our Trade Pros fix everything!

Water is important to everything on the planet! Draw a picture below that shows why water is important to the world.

But it's important to not use too much water, so draw a picture of what the world would look like if we ran out of water.
