Title: Burned dwellings in the town of Leer, South Sudan
Photographer / cameraman: Michael Goldfarb
Countries: South Sudan
Description: Dozens of burned dwellings are viewed from the air in the town of Leer, South Sudan, February 23, 2014. The MSF hospital in the town was also thoroughly looted, burned, ransacked, and effectively destroyed, along with most of Leer, sometime between the final days of January and early February, 2014, leaving hundreds of thousands of people cut off from critical, lifesaving medical care. The hospital,...

Title: Seeking malaria treatment around Aweil, South Sudan

Photographer / cameraman: Diana Zeyneb Alhindawi

Countries: South Sudan

Description: Akuot Yel carries her sick four-year-old son, Agok, from their village of Maluil to the nearby private clinic in town. Yesterday, Akuot took her son to the government-run primary health care unit (PHCU) nearby but they found nobody there. It was closed. PHCUs have no trained personnel to administer quinine intravenously, and often have no oral ACT medication in stock, so they do not open at all, thinking...

Countries: South Sudan

Description: Deng Kuol Nyanaguek, 30, comes from a village near Agok in South Sudan. She is pregnant and the size of his belly portends the birth of twins. The lack of ultrasound locally prevents certainty. Nyanaguek is pregnant for the sixth time which, coupled with the fact of expecting twins and with a baby is breech, place her in a risky situation. The MSF midwife encouraged to give birth in hospital rather...

Title: Melut, Upper Nile state, South Sudan

Photographer / cameraman: Paul Jawor

Countries: South Sudan

Description: When renewed fighting broke out in May 2015 in Melut, where MSF runs a clinic within the PoC site and a hospital in the displaced camp called Denthoma 1, MSF was forced to suspend its services in the camp for 16 days, depriving the population of much needed health care at a critical time, but was able to continue providing care in the clinic within the PoC. In the first three days of the fighting,...
