Ólafur Arnalds Returns To The Stage
‘Falling Apart Together’ World Tour Announced

19 Attempts at Dismantling The Distance Between Us
Including London’s O2 Apollo on 6th & 7th October 2026

Award-winning artist, composer and producer Ólafur Arnalds today announces his most daring and adventurous project to date, Falling Apart Together, a run of 18 immersive live shows, across Europe and the US  that attempt to dismantle the distance between us. Traversing the boundaries of what a concert can be, the show reveals the layers we construct in order to feel safe, the moments in which those layers tremble, and the sense of intimacy and shared humanity that emerges when we allow ourselves to be exposed.

Together with his team of devoted craftsmen and musicians, Ólafur presents a spellbinding blend of past and new material in a conceptual show that explores what becomes possible when we let ourselves unravel just enough to collectively open up and dismantle the boundaries of what a concert can be. Speaking about the shows, Ólafur says

"Falling Apart Together is an attempt at dismantling the distance between us. A concert hybrid that reveals the layers we construct in order to feel safe, the moments in which those layers tremble and the sense of intimacy and shared humanity that emerges when we allow ourselves to be exposed."

Following globally acclaimed tours for re:member and some kind of peace — which sold out iconic venues including the Royal Albert Hall, Elbphilharmonie, Sydney Opera House, and Walt Disney Concert Hall, and saw him perform to hundreds of thousands of fans worldwide — Ólafur now returns with his most intimate and boundary-pushing work to date.
