

Back to school 2022

Carving out space and time for homework is an important part of the school day. With the right tools and a quiet place to focus, a study routine will develop in no time.

Learn for life

As parents, we want kids to have what they need for school and learning at home, too. But every day is different, and so is every family. In the Back to school launch we've focused on showing flexible solutions for studying around the home, that kids can use their own way. We've also developed a theme around 'little rituals' of the school day. Learning isn't just about books - it's being organised and forming healthy routines, and we've got great ideas for how to do it.

With people coming and going, hallways can be one of the most hectic places in a home. Inspire kids to keep this area neat and tidy with colour-coded zones, organisers and name tags. Hanging coats and hats can be fun!

A desk that grows with you

Kids sprout up quickly, with each year they'll be into something new. A height-adjustable desk can grow with them every step of the way.

A child's desk setup featuring two white desk organizers, two white desk lamps, and a shelf with books and a box. The desk is white and has a light green wall behind it. A shelf above the desk holds a brown cardboard box, a green and blue container, and several books. A framed picture of an alpaca blowing a blue balloon is taped to the wall. The desk organizers are white and contain various school supplies like pens, pencils, and scissors. A yellow backpack is on the desk. A white chair with two circular cutouts is visible in the foreground.

A school day needs little rituals!
