Orange Belgium adds the NAT GEO WILD channel to its Love offer in Wallonia

Since April 10th, Orange Belgium's Love subscribers in Wallonia and the Brussels-Capital Region can discover the Nat Geo Wild channel in their TV offer. This channel dedicated to animals and nature joins the National Geographic channel already available to subscribers in their offer since March 2017 (channel 11).

Cristina Zanchi, Chief Consumer Officer, explains: "We are delighted to be able to add Nat Geo Wild to our offer, which includes a whole series of thematic channels, including sports channels, entertainment, children's channels... so that Orange Love can satisfy the broadest audience possible. That's how we can continue to expand our offer so that our Love customers can always enjoy premium content without having to pay more."

Included in the Love offering on channel 23, the Nat Geo Wild channel provides viewers with a better understanding of our ecosystem's stakes with unique documentaries that transport us to every corner of the globe. For example, it features the Destination Wild documentary collection which reveals sublime and still untamed landscapes, along with the Mission critical documentary series which focuses each month on a specific mission of the National Geographic photographers to show us the state of the wildlife and show us how to save species from extinction, protect ourselves, or adopt practices that respect the planet.

Olivier Bramly, SVP & Managing Director FNG South West Europe explains: "Collaborating with Orange Belgium logically fits our ambition to provide the best possible exposure to all of our channels in Belgium. We are delighted to count them among our preferred partners and offer their subscribers a new channel focused on discovery, with quality content."

The channel is already available in Flanders (channel 14).
